

Washington, D.C. – Tomorrow's episode of the History Channel's "Only in America with Larry the Cable Guy" will include Lincoln resident Dan Whitney visiting the office of his own congressional representative, Rep. Jeff Fortenberry. The episode features Whitney, more commonly known as "Larry the Cable Guy," going behind the scenes in our nation's capital. He opens and concludes the show interacting with Congressman Fortenberry from his Lincoln office.

"I tried to be funny. We'll see how it goes," Fortenberry said.

"In all seriousness, working with Dan was a terrific experience. It was a pleasure having him visit the office. He's a very generous person who's done a great deal for those in need in our community. 'Only in America' shines a light on the great diversity and rich character of our nation, and with each episode Larry tells the stories as only he can."

"Larry Goes to Washington" will air Wednesday, March 7, at 8 pm central/9 pm eastern on the History Channel.
